

September

Two thousand five hundred miles away from me
And I am here alone
I know I had to leave her, I had to leave my home
It's been dark here for three hours, and she's so far away
That only now the sun sets over her, over English Bay

Standing alone in the September sand, cold waves around her feet
I picture her there in growing shadow
She faces West, her back is turned to me, and maybe wonder why
She's warmed by sunshine, I stand in darkness,
And stare up at the sky

I haven't been away for long
Has she missed me since I'm gone
Does she still remember me?

Over never ending highways, I dreamed as I drove East
Sad songs playing on the radio
Through the deserts and mountains, wishing that I knew
So much time to spend in silence, thinking about you

I haven't been away for long
Has she missed me since I'm gone
Does she still remember me

(Solo)

I haven't been away for long
Has she missed me since I'm gone
Does she still remember me

Two thousand five hundred miles away from me
And I am here alone
But now we both stand in darkness
The West coast sun has finally set now
And Sarah turns away
The same stars that shine above me rise, over English Bay
